Budnick currently is launching The Anti-Recidivism Coalition (ARC), an organization of very high-achieving formerly incarcerated young adults who work to support one another, while stopping the flow of men and woman into the criminal justice system.

Wayne Kramer
Guitarist, Composer and Activist

Wayne Kramer is a songwriter whose reputation writing music for film and television risks supplanting his legend as one of the world’s stellar guitarists. Wayne was a teenage greaser and leader of the MC5, widely recognized as the prototype for punk rock and heavy metal. Ironically, he was also the first to incorporate a nod to free jazz in hard rock. In 1969, the MC5 released the incendiary album Kick Out The Jams on Elektra Records. After being dropped from Elektra due to “radical antics”, they released two albums on Atlantic Records: Back In The USA, produced by soon-to-be Bruce Springsteen’s manager Jon Landau; and the critically hailed High Time. Between world tours, Wayne scored Gold and The Living Theatre’s film production of Paradise Now.

Wayne spent 1976–1978 in Lexington Federal Penitentiary, where he was tutored by fellow inmate Charlie Parker’s trumpeter Red Rodney. It was Red who taught Wayne how to read music and the two formed a prison band. After release, Wayne co-wrote the acclaimed R&B musical The Last Words of Dutch Schultz with Mick Farren, then joined Don Was’ revolutionary acid funk band Was (Not Was) as the original guitarist. Wayne helped define the band’s sound through — of all things — a dance hit “Wheel Me Out”. In the 1980s in New York City, Wayne teamed up with the infamous Johnny Thunders for a short-lived, headline grabbing, punk rock group Gang War.

In 1994, Wayne moved to Los Angeles and signed with Epitaph Records. He recorded four records in as many years. He also produced and co-wrote the album Full Circle with former manager John Sinclair and produced a retrospective collection for Rhino Records entitled The Big Bang, and a punk compilation Beyond Cyberpunk.

In 2012, Wayne scored all three seasons of HBO’s East Bound & Down and the feature thriller Concrete Blondes as well as the acclaimed “zeitgeist” doc Let Fury Have The Hour. In 2013, he will write and produce original compositions for ShadowMachine’s stop-motion animation feature Hell & Back and he will compose the score for Nelson Algren, a documentary about the legendary Chicago writer. Wayne scored the comedy Talladega Nights: The Ballad of Ricky Bobby for Sony Pictures, where his song “Edge of the Switchblade” also runs at the film’s end title credits. Wayne composed the score for HBO’s controversial feature length documentary Hacking Democracy, which also utilized his “Something Broken in the Promised Land” as its title track. He wrote additional underscore for the feature film Daydreamer (Aron Paul).

While completing score and narration for the PBS documentary The Narcotic Farm about America’s decades-long failed drug war — as well as its free jazz soundtrack album entitled Lexington — Wayne was featured on the release of Activision’s video game Guitar Hero: World Tour. Recent playing is featured on Marianne Faithfull’s new album and he scored Shania Twain for the Oprah Winfrey Network (OWN).

On television, Wayne’s title theme for the Fox Sports program 5-4-3-2-1 was a bona fide hit and he now has many themes running on Fox including, Spotlight, In My Own Words and Under the Lights. Wayne composed the theme for E!’s hit series Split Ends as well as the “Unlabeled” commercial for Jim Beam. His songs have been featured in a wide array of TV shows and feature films Jackass, Judging Amy, Millenium, Almost Famous, Rock ‘n’ Roll High School, I Shot Andy Warhol and Pump Up the Volume. His cues are heard in NFL, NBA and MLB Playoff events and Food Network productions. He has written over 1000 cues for network production music catalogs, including Fox, TelePictures, PostHaste and Bravo’s series Kell on Earth, among others.

Wayne is recognized nearly as often as a vigorous social activist. Along with wife Margaret Saadi Kramer and legendary British singer Billy Bragg, Wayne founded Jail Guitar Doors USA, a Los Angeles based 501(c)3 non-profit group that provides guitars for use in prisoner rehabilitation. Known as “the loudest charity on planet earth,” JGD-USA launched at Sing Sing Prison in Spring 2009 and has since intervened at over 25 adult and juvenile — both minimum security and maximum-security — facilities in the USA. Shepadt Fairey donated the charity’s logo and board member Adam McKay’s company Funny or Die donated the design and programming of its interactive site. JGD-USA is currently building its Board of Directors.

Jack Bowers
Performing Musician and Songwriter/Composer; Chair, William James Association; and former Institutional Artist Facilitator, Soledad Prison

For twenty-five years Jack directed the Arts in Corrections program at Soledad State Prison, which involved hundreds of inmates in weekly fine arts activities, ranging from creative writing classes to music theory to luthiery. Currently, in addition to performing and recording in many venues in the Santa Cruz area, he is an active advocate for arts programming for prisoners and at risk youth through the William James Association, and serves on the board of the New Music Works.

Tom Skelly
Artist and Artist Facilitator, UCLA

Tom Skelly was born in St. Louis Missouri in 1952. He received a B.A. from the University of California at Santa Barbara and an M.F.A. from Claremont Graduate University in painting in 1979. Upon graduating he began exhibiting and teaching painting, drawing and design.

In 1980 Skelly accepted a full time civil service position as an Artist/Facilitator for the statewide Arts-In-Corrections program for the California Department of Correction and Rehabilitation. He designed and implemented a multi-disciplinary fine arts program at the California Institution for Men in Chino. During his thirty-year tenure, he developed an award-winning, inmate arts crew that created community beautification projects throughout southern California. The projects included murals, mosaics, sculptures, and media. Through the Arts In Corrections program, he partnered and worked with non-profit groups, schools, libraries, senior centers, police departments, and municipalities to improve the quality of their work environments and neighborhoods.

While at the institution he taught classes and workshops for inmates, supervised contract artists, wrote grants, managed budgets, curated exhibitions and special events for music, theater, and dance performances. He created two, half-hour radio documentaries for NPR's Soundprint for "The Artistic Culture of the Incarcerated" and "Prison Portraits" which received an award from the New York Festival's International Radio Competition in the field of Social Issues/Current Events category. In 2010 the Arts-In-Corrections program did not survive budget cuts for programming and was eliminated.

Skelly currently teaches a course called Art Programs at Correctional Institutions - History, Theory and Practice part time at UCLA. He also teaches a painting course for inmates at the California Rehabilitation Center through Cal Poly Pomona's Prison Education Project, and has lectured for the Arts Management department at Claremont Graduate University. These positions allow him to continue his commitment for prison reform through advocacy for the arts.

Panel 3: Undereducate/Overincarcerate: The Impact of the Arts in Underserved Areas (Testimony/Research)

Larry Brewster
Professor, School of Management, University of San Francisco

Dr. Brewster consults in areas of public policy and organizational development, and is author of several articles and books. Before joining USF, he was academic dean at Menlo College, and has served as dean at Golden Gate University and professor of Political Science in the California State University system. Dr. Brewster regularly consults in public policy and organizational development. He first evaluated the California Arts in Corrections in 1983, when he conducted a cost-benefit analysis. In 2010, Professor Brewster completed interviews with ex-cons who had participated in the program during their incarceration to learn of their experience in the program, how it affected them while inside, and how it has impacted their lives as free men and women. In the newly released Paths of Discovery, Art Practice and Its Impact in California Prison, the voices of the inmate-artists are heard through these interviews, just as their art and creativity are revealed in the beautiful photographs by co-author Peter Merts.

Danielle Brazell
Executive Director, Arts for LA

Danielle Brazell transitioned Arts for LA from an ad-hoc steering committee comprised of local executive arts leadership to a highly visible arts advocacy organization serving the greater Los Angeles region. Under her stewardship, Arts for LA has become a formidable coalition advancing the arts in the largest county in the country. In addition to surveying candidates seeking election in Los Angeles County, Arts for LA built a custom online communications infrastructure that allows for greater exchange of information and resources among the arts and arts education community. With strong input from the field, Arts for LA crafts a biannual Policy Framework to guide the region's collective advocacy efforts. Ms. Brazell's twenty years of experience include work as the director of special projects for the Screen Actors Guild Foundation and as the artistic director of Highways Performance Space. She has been honored with numerous grants and awards, including the 2000 Getty Fellowship, a 2009 CLEAR Communications Fellowship sponsored by the James Irvine Foundation, and a 2010 SHero Award from California State Senator Curran D. Carol Hinds
Secretary, Inmate Family Council

My name is Carol Hinds. I was born and raised in Los Angeles. I have been married 37 years and have one son who is 30 years old. I attended Santa Monica Community College as well as San Diego State with emphasis on physiology. My career has been in the medical field with initial emphasis in Dermatology. I currently am a medical office manager for a physician in Los Angeles specializing in Geriatrics for whom I have worked for the past 28 years. During my son’s youth, I was involved with his school, sports and Scouting activities, graduating him and one other to the rank of Eagle.

With my son’s sudden incarceration at age 18, parenting took on a new meaning. I realized how paralyzed I had suddenly become in terms of being involved in his life until discovering the Inmate Family Council at CSP–SAC. I joined the Council 10 years ago serving as Secretary which I continue to do today. As a voice for families of loved ones at the prison, the Council has enacted many positive changes with a respectful and collaborative approach.

With incarceration, education about the new life suddenly imposed on one is key. Understanding what is and is not possible at the very beginning of the process helps one choose a path. For me, my choice was clear. Serving on the IFC has been therapeutic in ways initially, I did not anticipate. It has been my path of opportunity to be involved in the prison process in a positive way, giving me a voice, an ability to make decisions, and a good direction. It is my parenting process, and an experience I could not be without. I look forward to finding more ways that will contribute to a better day for everyone serving time.

With special thanks to:

Ron Goodman
Artist

Ronnie Goodman is an artist living in San Francisco and painting in a Haight Street gallery. Goodman created a large body of artwork while doing time in at San Quentin and Folsom State prisons, where he participated in the Arts in Corrections program, studying with Katya McCulloch, Patrick Maloney and Bill Peterson. His work depicts and is inspired by his immediate surroundings inside the prison system. Katherine Blood, curator of prints at the Library of Congress, comments that “Goodman’s prints are consistently compelling— artistically, technically and in visual/narrative content.”

According to Goodman, “My work is an emotional experience reflecting on my personal growth in prison life as an artist. It is a reflection of my solitude and the deep souls of human beings.” Goodman completed his prison sentence in Fall 2010.

John Sklut
Artist
“Bird on White Picket Fence”

Peter Merts
Photographer who has photographed inmate-artists and their art at San Quentin State Prison for the past ten years. His photographs humanize the inmates who desperately want to learn new ways of expressing their emotions and imaginations as artists. Peter’s photographs of inmate art show the remarkable talent that is behind bars and in many cases tell the story of discovery and redemption. Peter is a fine art and documentary photographer who has exhibited, published, and lectured in the United States and abroad.
All art used by permission. The Committee would like to thank the artists who supported this hearing by sharing their work with us.
